Only two bids were received on the construction of approaches to the Nip-persink bridge over the Fox river, advertised for some time ago by Charles E. Russell, county superintendent of highways. The bids were as follows: Continental Bridge company of Chicago, $6,990, Joliet Bridge & Construction Co., of Joliet, $6,325. Supt. Russell considers these bids high and the proposition was taken under advisement. He also declared that the work may be re-advertised.

Railroad tickets in Wisconsin are now good for 30 days from the date of sale, following signature of Gov. Blaine to a committee on judiciary bill introduced at request of Brotherhood of Railroad Conductors. At present tickets have been usable only for one day after purchase.

The much disputed boundary line between Illinois and Wisconsin is soon to be settled with a survey.

Cost of sending a special delivery letter is to be raised from 10 to 25 cents. Postmaster General Hayes believes the public will prefer to pay the higher charge for better service than can be rendered under the present scale. Rural communities are to have better service, addresses wherever possible being notified by telephone.

The board of local improvements held a short session at the village hall on Monday evening of last week. However, no business of any importance was transacted. The sewer boosters in McHenry are still active and will never be satisfied until favorable action is taken on the sewerage question by the above named body.—Plaindealer.

Workmen at the Fox river dam are preparing for the widening of the water gates. Owing to an unusually high stage of water at this particular time the work is not progressing as rapidly as it would under more favorable conditions. However, the contractor is satisfied with the progress which has thus far been made and from now on the work should be pushed forward with greater speed.

The most important business deal in Waukegan in many months was the announcement last week of the sale of Ingalls Brothers Jewelry store, established in 1857, to Fred W. Funk of Waukegan and Fred H. Fall of Muskegon, Mich. The store was established by Joseph F. Ingalls and later his two sons, Chas. F. and Robert M. Ingalls, also became associated with the business of the institution. Since the death of Robert Ingalls, a number of years ago the business has been conducted solely by Charles Ingalls but it has continued under the name of Ingalls Bros.

Len Small Backs Lake County in Good Roads Plan

Governor Len Small is taking a keen interest in the early completion of the various road improvements projects in Lake county and expressed himself as realizing the urgent need of the county because of its proximity to Chicago, whose traffic through here is heavy.

He commented upon these facts at length Tuesday at Springfield where he met in conference with a delegation of Lake county men, including Charles E. Russell, county superintendent of highways, Ray Paddock, chairman of the board of supervisors, George Baird and William Stratton.

Gov. Small discussed the road plans for the location of the Libertyville-Antioch state bond issue road, and declared that he will see that this route is located, as until this is done the county officials will be unable to determine several other routes which are to be established and improved. The Libertyville-Antioch road will be materially shortened by making several cut-offs. Among the road improvements that are being held up pending the location of this road is the Lake Villa-Antioch road.

"I am anxious to see Lake county go ahead with its road work," Gov. Small declared, "and will co-operate in every way I can to see that the improvements are made as soon as possible."

If the state locates the Libertyville-Antioch road so that the Lake Villa-Antioch road can be made a part of the project the county will construct an overhead crossing about one mile north of Lake Villa over the Soo line. The hearing on the location of the Libertyville-Antioch road has been set for July 29.

Infantile Paralysis Reported at Highland Park

Three cases of Infantile Paralysis have occurred in Highland Park, Ill., during the past week.

This is a disease especially effecting young children, caused by a virus which enters the body through the nose. It may be communicated by the breath or carried by flies. The legal period of quarantine for patients is three weeks and for all who have come in contact with a patient a quarantine of two weeks.

While the situation is not at all alarming, reasonable precautions should not be neglected. The surest way to avoid contagion is to keep the children at home for two or three weeks. If they are taken out for a walk or drive, places of possible public gatherings should be avoided as well as close contact with all other persons.

TO ORGANIZE LEGION POST IN ANTIOCH

Much interest was aroused at a meeting held Tuesday evening at the News office when a number of ex-service men formed to establish an Antioch Post of the American Legion.

There are over eighty young men in Antioch and surrounding villages who took part in the late war and the outlook for an active post is assured. It was stated at the meeting that a charter will be asked for immediately. Only fifteen members are required to establish a legion post.

The next meeting will be held Monday evening, July 25, at 8 p. m., at the News office, and all young men are requested to be present to make the Antioch Post one of the most active in the state. At Monday's meeting it is hoped to have some experienced legion workers here to address the young men and help them in their organizing work. Each man that was present at the last meeting has pledged to bring another member and after the post is organized the News will install a regular "American Legion" column in its paper.

Commercial Men to Brighten Up Display Windows

The business men of Antioch are co-operating with the News in a plan to make the display windows of the local stores more attractive. There are a few excellent show windows in the business district, but a good many that are anything but attractive, having the same, uncleaned for months, month after month, which the passers-by become acquainted with and holds no interest for them.

It is the intention of the Antioch News to brighten up these windows and make the business district a thing of beauty, and the News, starting with next week's issue, will give a quarter page display ad in their paper free to the merchant having the best display window.

At the meeting of the Commercial association Monday night, the business men appointed H. R. Adams, A. G. Watson and Rev. S. E. Pollock to act as judges and report to the News management their choice, after which our advertising manager will call on the "best window merchant" to receive "copy" for a quarter page to be inserted in the News free.

It is now up to the merchants to get busy and brighten up the town. A good window display acts as the best possible salesman and will often sell goods which would lay on the shelves year after year, which would give the business man the opportunity to sell nothing but the latest goods.

Free ads will be given each week until further notice.

Hayes-White Wedding Is a Beautiful Affair

On Tuesday, July 19, at four o'clock a very pretty wedding was performed at the home of Arthur Hayes, when his sister, Pearl, became the bride of Clarence White of Antioch.

The bride is the only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Hayes of Chetek, Wis., and is a popular and most highly esteemed young lady.

The groom is the eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. John White of Antioch. The groom saw two years of foreign service with the 32nd Division, 107th supply train with enlistment from Kenosha, Wis.

As Miss Leah Burmsted played Mendelssohn's wedding march, the bridal party formed under an arch of maple leaves ferns and baby breath, where the Rev. George Hall performed the ceremony. The double ring ceremony was used, with little Miss Rena Marsh, as ring bearer. She carried the ring on a pillow of white satin. She wore a pretty frock of pale satin.

The bride was given away by her brother, Arthur, she wore a beautiful gown of white silk lace, embroidered in silver over white satin etalle. Her veil was embroidered in silver and beads, which was held in place with a band of pearls. The bridal bouquet was made up of white roses, and smilax.

Miss Agnes White, sister of the groom, acted as maid of honor and was charmingly dressed in peach bloom organdie, and carried a bouquet of roses.

Miss Mary Tait, acted as bridesmaid and was prettily dressed in pale green organdie, she also carried roses.

Arthur Hayes acted as best man. Miss Beatrice Richardson sang several beautiful solos preceding the ceremony and during the dinner.

The rooms were artistically decorated in pink and white with maple leaves and golden rod outwined, baskets and wreaths adorned the dining table, which had covers laid for the many relatives and friends. A six course dinner was served under the efficient supervision of Mrs. C. M. Andrus.

The young couple left on a motor trip through the state of Wisconsin, and will be at home to their many friends after August 1, at Antioch.

How Do They Get That Way?

Just after the village goes through much expense and a lot of inconvenience in grading and oiling the roads, and after auto and wagon traffic hardens the surface and puts them in excellent shape, along comes a big threshing engine with knobs on the wheels four inches high and as sharp as a bottle axe dragging a water tank and separator, cutting the roadbed like a plow cutting a corn field. How do they get that way?

O-mi-gosh ain't the skirts in Antioch and at the lake resorts getting short, or is it that the girls are outgrowing their dresses. Of course there was an excuse during the war for short skirts on account of the shortage of goods, combined with the thrift habit, but this year they are shorter than ever. What will happen should there be another war? O-mi-gosh.

M. G.—"Yes, but take a light off my cigar. I don't like to supply matches for cigarettes."

M. F.—"How come?"

M. G.—"You fellows that smoke cigarettes use up too many of my matches."

Mrs. and Mr. Billy R. of the chop house have been in the habit of seeing Marmons, Packards and Fiats standing in front of their eat shop so long that they decided to take unto themselves a car—"Oh well a Ford is a good car too."

Chicago Legion Post Opens Camp at Loon Lake

Lawndale-Crawford American Legion Post No. 98, of Chicago, has established a camp on the north side of Loon lake. At present there are five army tents pitched.

This post has a membership of 700, one of the largest in Illinois. They have the largest legion band and drum and bugle corps in the United States, numbering ninety pieces, directed by Edward Freund, former leader of General Pershing's band stationed at Chaumont, France. Mr. Freund spends his week ends at the camp.

This post captured first prize for handling more claims against the government than any other post, over 3,300 cases being taken care of by the former service officer, Edward P. Skubie and the present officer, Joseph Baumruk, Jr.

The post, up to the present time, gave military burials to twenty-seven of their returned buddies. This is claimed to be a record.

Edward P. Skubie is spending his vacation at the camp and some of the bandmen are also spending their vacations during the last two weeks of July.

The post claims a base ball nine which has not been defeated this year and are lending the southern division of the American Legion league.

This report indicates that this year's donations will exceed last year's $5,200 road fund, and the committee reported itself as very much encouraged over the result of their work so far. The committee has been unable to call upon all residents of Antioch and those residing at the lakes and earnestly solicit any contributions that may be offered to this great work. The Brook State bank has offered its services to act as treasurer and any contributions to this fund will be greatly appreciated, as the expense of keeping up the 72 miles of roadway in Antioch township is an expense to large for a few interested citizens to uphold.

SENATE HALTS BONUS MEASURE

Service Men's Bill Sent Back to Committee by Harding's Order.

"Big Money" Gets Slap in the Controversy—Senators Reed and McCumber Came Near Blows During the Argument.

Washington, July 18.—Acting on the request of President Harding, the senate recommitted the McCumber bill to the finance committee. The vote was 47 to 29.

An amendment to the motion to recommit the soldier bonus bill, which would have directed the committee to report out the soldier bonus legislation again by the first Monday in January, 1922, was defeated, 67 to 0.

Following the vote, Senator McCumber, Republican of North Dakota, author of the measure, took the floor. He started a speech in extenuation of the senate's action. Senator Robinson, Democrat of Arkansas, objected on the ground that McCumber's speech was an apology for the senate's action. A parliamentary tangle ensued, lasting 45 minutes, during which time the senate was in an uproar most of the time. Senator McCumber finally was allowed to continue.

During the turmoil it appeared at one time as though Senator Reed, Democrat of Missouri, and Senator McCumber would come to blows. In fact, there was a threat to "settle it outside" after the session adjourned.

In the course of his remarks, Senator McCumber stated that the soldiers would get their bonus when Europe pays her war debt to the United States. Senator Reed retorted that that would be many years. Senator McCumber took issue with the fighting Missouri, and Senator Reed jumped to his feet, saying:

"I am tired of senators on that side of the aisle questioning me when I get up to state a fact. It is going to happen one day or other."

"Bah!" replied Senator McCumber. "The senator does not know the character of the man with whom he is dealing."

"As to the senator's courage and physical prowess," replied Senator Reed, "he's at liberty to parade them right here and now."

Pounding his desk, Senator McCumber shouted: "I accept the senator's challenge, and I'll meet him outside."

There was a momentary lull, then the controversy broke again in all its fury when Senator Reed said:

"I never saw a blackguard yet who did not want to go outside to settle something. But the outside is a big place. There is usually safety in it."

The roll call follows:

For recommitment—Republicans: Tall, Borah, Brandegee, Culler, Cramer, Cummins, Curtis, Dillingham, Edge, Ernst, Fernald, Frellaghuysen, Gooding, Hale, Kellogg, Kenyon, Keyes, Knox, Lodge, McCormick, McKinley, McNary, Moses, Nelson, New, Nichols, Norbeck, Oddie, Penrose, Peltzer, Shortridge, Smoot, Stanford, Sterling, Westworth, Warren, Watson (Indiana), Weller, and Willis—39.

Democrats: Dial, Glass, King, Myers, Simmons, Swanson, Underwood and Williams—8. Total for recommitment—47.

Against—Republicans: Bursum, Capper, Elkins, Harrell, Jones (Washington), Ladd, La Follette, Norris and Sutherland—0. Democrats: Ashurst, Broussard, Caraway, Calhoun, Fletcher, Gerry, Harris, Harrison, Healin, Hitchcock, Jones (New Mexico), Kendrick, McKellar, Pittman, Robinson, Sheppard, Stanley, Walsh (Massachusetts), Walsh (Montana) and Watson (Georgia)—20. Total against recommitment—29.

Senator Walsh (Dem., Mass.) in the course of the four-hour debate that preceded the vote on the bill asserted that the recommitment would be a humiliating spectacle.

"It will be hailed on every platform," said Mr. Walsh to the Republican side, "as an indication of your stupidity, irresponsibility and evasiveness. You may think, senators, that you are fooling the American people, but you are not fooling these patriotic ex-service men."

"Big money-holding classes," he said, were behind the fight against the bill.

Supporting recommitment, Senator New (Rep., Ind.), pleaded against "rocking the nation's financial boat" referring to widespread distress among farmers and business men, who, he said, would have to bear the bulk of a bonus burden.

"If the banks would close in and collect, the country would be in the hands of a receivership in a few minutes and everybody knows it," he said.

MILLIONS FLEE RED STARVATION

Berlin Hears That 20,000,000 People Are Getting Out of Russia.

FAMINE NATIONAL CALAMITY

Hunger-Tortured Refugees Reported to Have Reached Petrograd and Moscow From Central Russia.

Berlin, July 19.—More than 20,000,000 people, seeking to escape death by starvation, are fleeing from central Russia in all directions, according to reports received in Russian emigrant circles here.

The advance wave of the hunger-tortured refugees is reported to have reached Petrograd and Moscow, intensifying the already bad situation in those cities.

Reports received here are to the effect that the heat and drought have been so intense and prolonged that great cracks have appeared in the earth, trees are leafless and wells and streams are dried up.

Almost all of the cattle are said to have been slaughtered for food to prevent their death by starvation and the refugees are declared to be existing on roots, bark, moss and the bark of trees.

In many places whole villages, seeing certain death by starvation staring them in the face, have packed what they could carry with them and are wandering all over the country north, east, south and west in the hope of finding some place where they can get food.

The vast majority of the refugees are moving in an easterly direction toward the Kirghiz country in Turkestan, Siberia, with a smaller army headed toward the southern governments and the Kuban region.

Riga, Latvia, July 19.—The Izvestia of Moscow says that an official appeal to all citizens of Russia to aid in alleviating suffering caused by famine, signed by all the members of the government, places the number of starving at not less than 10,000,000 in the Astrakhan, Saratov, Samara, Simbirsk, Ufa and Vinnitsa governments, and along the Volga, in the Tartar republic, and the Shavsh territory.

These, the appeal says, cannot exist until the next harvest without aid. The famine is characterized as a national calamity.

According to an American relief expert in Riga, the cost of completely relieving this number from outside of Russia would exceed $40,000,000 monthly.

George Tchitcherine, the Russian soviet foreign minister, denies that a direct appeal has been made for American aid to alleviate the famine. Reports appearing in Baltic states newspapers were that an appeal had been made through Senator Joseph L. France of Maryland, who is now in Russia.

M. Tchitcherine's message reads: "We have not appealed to America, except through the widespread radio appeals of Maxim Gorky and the Most Rev. Dr. Elkhov, patriarch of all Russia. We have no connection with the American government, and, therefore, have no intention to appeal to Americans for help. Have in mind that we cannot ask for American relief representatives when we have no existing relations."

Hoover Says Disarmament Only One of World's Wants.

Secretary of Commerce Outlines Harding Program at Realty Men's Chicago Convention.

Chicago, July 19.—World disarmament, the hope of President Harding in his conference of nations, is one of the vital spokes in the great economic program of the United States, Secretary of Commerce Hoover told the convention of the National Association of Real Estate Boards here.

"Settlement of the tariff is not the only thing in the readjustment program of our President," Secretary Hoover said. "It includes revision of our tax system, reduction of government expenditure, reorganization of the federal machinery for more efficient service, reorganization of our merchant marine, refunding of the foreign loans and relief of the world from armament."

"These are some of the things that confront the administration. Others, some of which are almost as important as those already mentioned, are assistance to exporters of commodities, upbuilding and safeguarding of our foreign commerce, assistance to our farmers by mobilization of private credit, expeditious settlement of the obligations of the government to the railroads, encouragement to development of our great power resources and research and education upon improvement in our processes of production and distribution."

One of the most difficult problems, the secretary declared, in which the realtors were directly interested, is that of housing. Estimating that nearly 60 per cent of the population are living as tenants, he said, "nothing is worse for the life and prosperity of a nation than increased tenantry and landlordism."

Ex-German Destroyers Sent to Bottom in Target Practice Off Virginia Capes.

On Board the Destroyer Scudder, July 18.—Both remaining ex-German destroyers, the V-43 and S-132, allocated to the United States by the treaty makers at Versailles, were sunk by gunners of the American navy at a point 60 miles east of the Virginia capes, in 60 fathoms of water.

The V-43 sank at 4:50 o'clock in the afternoon, the S-132 at 7:02 o'clock at night. Each destroyer was attacked by an American destroyer with four-inch guns; then by five-inch shells from battleships.

HARDING FEARS OIL DUTY PERIL

Fordney Bares President's Letter Opposing Tax as Menace to America.

HOUSE KILLS THE SECTION

Vote of the Committee of the Whole for Elimination of the Impost Is 187 For to 79 Against.

Washington, July 20.—By a vote of 187 to 79, the house in committee of the whole struck from the Fordney tariff bill the duty on crude oil and ordered it back to the free list.

The vote was so overwhelming for free oil that its most active advocates have surrendered hope that oil can be restored to the dutiable list.

Much of the credit for defeating the diligent effort to levy an impost on oil imports is given to the intervention of President Harding, whose letter opposing such a tariff was laid before the house by Chairman Fordney of the ways and means committee, although the President twice wrote Chairman Fordney protesting against such a duty, but Mr. Fordney declined to make the second of the letters public, despite demands from the minority side of the floor that he do so.

The President's letter, which was laid before the house, was written June 30, addressed to Chairman Fordney. It said:

"I understand that your committee is very soon to decide whether to include a protective duty on crude oil in the tariff bill to be reported to the house. I cannot refrain from expressing the hope that your committee will take note of the foreign policy to which we are already committed, under which the government is doing every consistent thing to encourage the participation of American citizens in the development of the oil resources in many foreign lands. This course has been inspired by the growing concern of our country over the supply of crude oil to which we may turn for our future needs, not alone for our domestic commerce but in meeting the needs of our navy and our merchant marine."

"To levy a protective tariff on crude petroleum now would be at variance with all that has been done to safeguard our future interests."

"I am not unmindful of the oil industry within our own borders and most cordially believe in its proper consideration. Would it not be practicable to provide for such protection in some bargaining provision which may be placed in the hands of the Executive so that we may guard against the levy of duties against us or the imposition by other nations of export tariffs which are designed to hinder the facilitation of trade which is essential to our welfare?"

"In the matter of crude oil, and in the one of lumber, concerning which we talked, our position will be the stronger if the tariff levy is omitted and authority is given the Executive to impose a duty in appropriately stated circumstances. I hope your committee will find it consistent to give consideration to these suggestions."

Neither the committee on ways and means nor the house, both of which were in the final test overwhelmingly against any form of oil duty, acted on the President's suggestion for even a reciprocal or retaliatory arrangement on oil such as the committee wrote into the lumber schedule. The test came on a straight amendment to strike out from the dutiable list, as offered by Representative Treadway, Republican, of Massachusetts.

The object of the Good Fellows of America was to make a drive to secure legislation permitting the manufacture of light wines and beers. Hansen was the founder.

SYMPTOMS WOMEN DREAD

Mrs. Wilson's Letter Should Be Read by All Women

Clearfield, Pa.—"After my last child was born last September I was unable to do all of my own work. I had severe pains in my left side every month and had fever and sick dizzy spells and such pains during my periods, which lasted two weeks. I heard of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound doing others so much good and thought I would give it a trial. I have been very glad that I did, for now I feel much stronger and do all of my work. I tell my friends when they ask me what helped me, and they think it must be a grand medicine. And it is. You can use this letter for a testimonial if you wish."—Mrs. HARRY A. WILSON, R. F. D. 5, Clearfield, Pa.

The experience and testimony of such women as Mrs. Wilson prove beyond a doubt that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will correct such troubles by removing the cause and restoring the system to a healthy normal condition. When such symptoms develop as backaches, bearing-down pains, displacements, nervousness and "the blues," a woman cannot get too promptly in trying Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound if she values her future comfort and happiness.

The House of Lights.

"The vast hall was a blaze of dazzling light. From the center of the ceiling, almost touching the heads of the guests, hung a magnificent chandelier, fashioned like a huge rose, boasting a hundred gleaming electric bulbs which cast a wondrous radiance over the great assembly. Every niche in the ornate walls had a gleaming bulb and every alcove was a miniature of light. It was magnificent."

At this point the struggling author dropped his pen and called out to his wife: "Tossie, for goodness' sake bring me another candle!"

The Antioch News

Entered at the postoffice in Antioch, Ill., as second-class matter.

Published each Thursday by The Antioch Press, Antioch, Ill.

Price: $2.00 a year, in advance

The following article taken from the Daily American Tribune, published at Dubuque, Iowa, in its issue of July 13, will, no doubt, be read with interest by many of the milk producers of this community:

"Editor of Equity News, Organ of farmers' organizations, says Badger producers allow outsiders to set price—says farmers need organization. Milwaukee—Wisconsin farmers and business men are losing more than two and one-half million dollars a year because they are unorganized and allow outside foreign corporations to come in and set the price on Wisconsin's most important and most valuable product—milk, according to M. Wesley Tubbs, editor of the Equity News, official organ of the state Equity society. 'Wisconsin produces over eight billion pounds of milk,' said Mr. Tubbs, 'and aside from the peak prices of war time Wisconsin farmers receive an average of 32 cents per 100 pounds less than the average price paid for milk in the United States, taken as a whole.'—Richmond.

Adoption of a three price schedule and levying a ton per cent spread against June milk was announced last Friday by President James H. Love of the Milk Producers' Co-operative Marketing Co. as the result of action taken at a directors' meeting Thursday.

Dairymen selling to condensers, raw milk dealers and butter plants will all receive different prices. For the first time since the company was organized, the monthly spread will not be used to equalize the price to be paid farmers over the entire district. "Instead," said Treasurer F. H. Reese, of Dundee, "the levy will be used to equalize prices paid in the three different classes or stations. Farmers selling to condensed milk factories will all receive the same price, despite the fact that some condensers are paying more than others. The same will be true of farmers selling to bottling and butter plants."

The bottling plant price for last month was $2.05 per hundred pounds. The butter price is yet to be announced. It will, however, be the smallest of the three prices, according to Mr. Reese.—Elgin Courier.

Prices on Farm Implements Cut by the Makers

Tractors and other farm machinery and implements are cheaper. The branch house of the manufacturers at Peoria announce a new scale of prices which show radical reductions, the heaviest cut since the close of the war.

Wagons, buggies, engines, plows, hay presses, grain drills and many other farm tools have been reduced fifteen per cent, it is announced. Tractors which have been selling at $1,200 are now $1,000; while those which were quoted at $2,300 are now $1,950.

The managers of the branch houses say that the lesser quotations are not due to any decrease in the cost of production, but because of the "farmers' strike," inaugurated last fall when grain prices were hammered down to such a low figure that impelled the men who till the soil to refrain from buying.

In order to stimulate trade and keep the manufacturing plants in operation, the companies have decided to share a loss with the farmer and get back, as quickly as possible, to the pre-war level.

The new prices are based upon the best calculations that can be made as to what costs will be upon materials, gain in labor rates and in labor efficiency in the near future. On the goods affected, both in stock and to be shipped for some time to come, manufacturers assert that they are shouldering a heavy loss.

Conways Prove Easy for Antioch

When it comes to base ball there is not so much in a name. Take for instance the Conway specials from Kenosha that played ball on the local diamond last Sunday, or we might say they tried to play, sure was a poor showing, many times during the game they were either asleep or they complained of the weather.

The fans were all broke up by the affair and had many comments to pass. Of course it is not fair to blame the local team for they can never tell until the afternoon of the game just what kind of material they are going up against, some times though they are given to understand such and such a team has a good record and then they get fooled.

The game was so easy for the locals that they hardly realized when the game was over, and from the way they looked a double-header would not bother them in the least.

Bobbie, that boy wonder, pitched a no hit, no run game, striking out seventeen men and walking two just to see them get plucked at second.

Antioch made seventeen hits and earned a run for every hit. Flala, second baseman did a little better, a home run with a pair of six dollar shoes to his credit. The game lasted the nine innings with a final score of 17 to 0.

The score:

Libertyville Papers Fight Over Contract Awarding

The Libertyville public is very much worked up over the problem of whether the village board is capable of solving problems in long division. The Libertyville Independent charges the board with awarding the town printing contract to the Lake County Register at 10 cents a line after the Independent had put in a bid of four cents. The County Register claims that the circulation of the Independent is only 200 and that their circulation is nearly 600, and offers to submit proofs of the assertion, therefore, "consider their claim to a higher rate is just."

Electricity and Chinese Demons.
Word has come from Shanghai that employees of the China Electric company recently called in a native priest to drive away the demon in an electric buzz saw which had cut off two of the operator's fingers. After the ceremony the workmen returned to their tasks contentedly. The manager of the plant felt that, despite the superstition displayed, these Chinese workmen were accepting electricity in their own way.—North American.

Motion Picture Horse Insured

Man o' War was retired from the track as the most famous race horse, but Black Beauty is the most famous horse of all time. Anna Sewell's wonderful work, more than forty years after its first publication, still stands eighth among the most popular books in the world.

The trained horse which plays the role of Black Beauty in Vitagraph's all star special production of the Anna Sewell masterpiece is a splendid animal, and for ordinary uses that such a horse is put to it probably is worth $1,000. It was insured for $50,000, however, and even this amount would not have paid the loss to Vitagraph if anything had happened to the animal.

"Black Beauty" will be shown at the Crystal theatre tomorrow and Saturday.

Mr. Chinn is planning a gala week at his theatre. Every evening next week there will be a feature picture, the biggest of which will be "Once to Every Woman."

Lake County Farms in Demand

The fact that Lake county farms are right now in demand is demonstrated by the fact that T. J. Stahl & Co. of Waukegan, have negotiated the sale of no less than seven farms the last 31 days, aggregating over $100,000.

The buyers have been for the most part Lake county farmers who know the character of the soil and are acquainted with its possibilities and believe in investments at home.

If You Feel Warm, Go to the Isle of Man

During the extreme hot weather of the past few weeks William Kelly, sent an Antioch News to relatives in The Isle of Man, England, pointing to an article on the heat. Tuesday he received a paper from the England city which contained an article, of the real hot weather they are having there.

"Saturday was about the warmest day of the year, so far, and a good many people unaccustomed to real heat, talked about a heat wave as they sat in the shade perspiring and swallowing cooling things. The temperature, as a fact, never exceeded 66 in shade, as against 80 in London. The best way to boom the Isle of Man is to advertise it as the coolest place in Europe at the present time."

Up to yesterday there was no change in the weather and the drought still continues."

Protection—

When out on the road isn't it a great comfort to follow the Chicago Motor Club marked highways? The yellow band is always in sight. You know that number six will take you to Clinton, Iowa, without a chance of getting off the road. Number one to Danville, and so on through the long list of blazed trails.

Enough paint was used by the Chicago Motor Club in marking the highways in 1920 to double coat fifty-two bungalows.

We are making the highways safe for you and your family. Will you help us in this work by joining now?

Thrills, Mystery and Love in "Fighting Shepherdess"

An almost lifelike story of how a simple, inconspicuous girl, through a strange series of incidents arose from the depths of a western roadhouse and obscure and uncertain parentage to a position of wealth and power in her community is the story of "The Fighting Shepherdess," from the famous book by Cora Jane Lockhart, and the latest Anita Stewart production which will be seen at the Majestic theatre on Saturday.

A Life Saver On a Ford

Ford owners are the victims of many unnecessary accidents. Drivers are constantly in danger of losing control of a Ford car every time it runs over a bump. This is because the steering of a Ford is direct instead of worm gear as other cars.

A little device has been invented that eliminates this danger. It sells for one-tenth the price of a worm gear, but does exactly the same work. Makes the Ford steer like a $3,000 car. Keeps the front wheels from whipping in the mud. Relieves the driver of the constant side pull on sliding roads. Makes the Ford a pleasure car. Guaranteed the life of any Ford car. Can easily be installed by any one in five minutes.

FARMER'S WIFE NEARLY STARVED

Mrs. Peterson Says She Was Afraid to Eat on Account of Trouble That Followed.

"I weighed just a hundred and three pounds when I began taking Tanlac, but now I weigh a hundred and twenty-two pounds," declared Mrs. Amy Peterson, the wife of a prosperous farmer at Lakeville, Mass., a suburb of New Bedford.

"I had acute indigestion," she said, "and no one knows how I suffered. I had cramping pains in my stomach that were almost unbearable, and I suffered no end of distress from gas and bloating. Why, I was actually starving to keep from being in such awful misery, and I lost thirteen pounds in weight. Sometimes I wonder how I lived through it all, and I just thought there was no hope for me. I was restless night and day and was easily irritated, and some nights I slept so little it didn't seem that I had been to bed at all."

"But now I feel as strong and well as if I had never been sick a day in my life, and I just know Tanlac is the best medicine in the world. I haven't a touch of indigestion now, and every time I sit down to the table I can't help but feel thankful to Tanlac. I have a wonderful appetite and have gained back all my lost weight and six pounds besides. I am simply overjoyed to be feeling so well, and I just praise Tanlac everywhere I go."

Tanlac is sold by leading druggists everywhere.—Advertisement.

WOMEN NEED SWAMP-ROOT

Thousands of women have kidney and bladder trouble and never suspect it. Women's complaints often prove to be nothing else but kidney trouble, or the result of kidney or bladder disease.

If the kidneys are not in a healthy condition, they may cause the other organs to become diseased.

Pain in the back, headache, loss of ambition, nervousness, are often times symptoms of kidney trouble.

Don't delay starting treatment. Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, a physician's prescription, obtained at any drug store, may be just the remedy needed to overcome such conditions.

Get a medium or large size bottle immediately from any drug store.

However, if you wish first to test this great preparation send ten cents to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., for a sample bottle. When writing be sure and mention this paper.

He came stealing across the snow—a musher of the first degree. Very silently and swiftly he slipped off his snowshoes at the door. The door itself was unlocked, just as he had supposed. In an instant more he was "tip-toeing," a dark, silent figure, through the corridors of the house. He held his rifle ready in his hands.

He peered into Lennox's bedroom first. The room was unoccupied. Then the floor of the corridor creaked beneath his step; and he knew nothing further was to be gained by waiting. If Lennox suspected his presence, he might be waiting with aimed rifle as he opened the door of the living room.

He glided fuster. He halted once more—a moment at the living-room door to see if Lennox had been disturbed. He was lying still, however, so Cranston pushed through.

Lennox glanced up from his magazine to find that unmistakable thing, the barrel of a rifle, pointed at his breast. Cranston was one of those rare marksmen who shoot with both eyes open—and that meant that he kept his full visual powers to the last instant before the hammer fell.

"I can't raise my arms," Lennox said simply. "One of 'em won't work at all—besides, against the doctor's orders."

Cranston stole over toward him, looking closely for weapons. He pulled aside the wooden blanket that Lennox had drawn up over his body, and he pushed his hand into the cushions of the couch. A few detritus, holding his rifle through the fork of his arm, finger coiled into the trigger guard, assured him that Lennox was not "heeled" at all. Then he laughed and went to work.

"I thought I told you once," Lennox began with perfect coldness, "that the doors of my house were no longer open to you."

"You did say that," was Cranston's guttural reply. "But you see I'm here just the same, don't you? And what are you going to do about it?"

"I probably felt that sooner or later you would come to steal—just as you and your crowd stole the supplies from the forest station last winter—and that probably influenced me to give the orders. I didn't want thieves around my house, and I don't want them now. I don't want coyotes, either."

"And I don't want any such remarks out of you, either," Cranston answered him. "You lie still and shut up, and I suspect that sissy boarder of yours will come back after he's through embracing your daughter in the snow, and find you in one piece. Otherwise not."

"If I were in one piece," Lennox answered him very quietly, "instead of a bundle of broken bones that can't lift its arms, I'd get up off this couch, unarmed as I am, and stamp on your lying lips."

But Cranston only laughed and tied Lennox's feet with a cord from the window shade. He went to work very systematically. First he rifled Lennox's desk in the living room. Then he looked on all the mantels and ransacked the cupboards and the drawers. He was taunting and calm at first. But as the moments passed, his passion grew up on him. He no longer smiled. The rodent features became intent; the eyes narrowed to curious, bright slits under the dark lashes. He went to Dan's room, searched his bureau drawer and all the pockets of the clothes hanging in his closet. He upset his trunk and pawed among old letters in the suitcase. Then, stealing like some creature of the wilderness, he came back to the living room.

Lennox was not on the divan where he had left him. He lay instead on the floor near the fireplace; and he met the passion-driven face with entire calmness. His motives were perfectly plain. He had just made a desperate effort to procure Dan's rifle that hung on two sets of deer horns over the fireplace, and was entirely exhausted from it. He had succeeded in getting down from the couch, though wracked by agony, but had been unable to lift himself up in reach of the gun.

Cranston read his intention in one glance. Lennox knew it, but he simply didn't care. He had passed the point where anything seemed to matter.

"Tell me where it is," Cranston ordered him. Again he pointed his rifle at Lennox's wasted breast.

"Tell you where what is? My money?"

"You know what I want—and it isn't money. I mean those letters that falling found on the ridge. I'm through fooling, Lennox. Dan learned that long ago, and it's time you learned it now."

"Dan learned it because he was sick. He isn't sick now. Don't presume too much on that."

Cranston laughed with harsh scorn. "But that isn't the question. I said I've wasted all the time I'm going to. You are an old man and helpless; but I'm not going to let that stand in the way of getting what I came to get. They're hidden somewhere around this house. I've watched, and he's had no chance to take them into town. I'll give you—just five seconds to tell me where they're hidden."

"And I give you," Lennox replied, "one second less than that—to go to hell!"

Both of them breathed hard in the quiet room. Cranston was trembling now, shivering just a little in his arms and shoulders. "Don't let me wrong, Lennox," he warned.

"And don't have any delusions in regard to me, either," Lennox replied. "I've stood worse pain from this accident than any man can give me while I yet live, no matter what he does. If you want to get on me and hammer me in the approved Cranston way, I can't defend myself—but you won't get a civil answer out of me. I'm used to pain, and I can stand it. I'm not used to fawling to a coyote like you, and I can't stand it."

But Cranston hardly heard. An idea had flamed in his mind and cast a red glow over all the scene about him. It was instilling a poison in his nerves and a madness in his blood, and it was searing him, like fire, in his dark brain. Nothing seemed real. He suddenly bent forward, tense.

"That's all right about you," he said. "But you'd be a little more polite if it was Snowbird—and Dan—that would have to pay."

Perhaps the color faded slightly in Lennox's face; but his voice did not change.

"They'll see your footprints before they come in and be ready," Lennox replied evenly. "They always come in by the back way. And even with a pistol, Snowbird's a match for you."

"Did you think that was what I meant?" Cranston scorned. "I know a way to destroy these letters, and I'll do it—in the four seconds that I said, unless you tell me, I'm not even sure I'm going to give you a chance to tell now; it's too good a scheme. There won't be any witnesses then to yell around in the courts. What if I choose to set fire to this house?"

"It wouldn't surprise me a great deal. It's your own trade," Lennox shrugged once on his place on the floor.

"I wouldn't have to worry about those letters then, would I? They are somewhere in the house, and they'd be burned to ashes. But that isn't all that would be burned. You could maybe crawl out, but you couldn't carry the guns, and you couldn't carry the pantry full of food. You're nearly eighty miles up here from the nearest occupied house, with two pair of snowshoes for the three of you and one dinky pistol. And you can't walk at all. It would be a nice pickle, wouldn't it? Wouldn't you have a fat chance of getting down to civilization?"

The voice no longer held steady. It trembled with passion. This was no idle threat. The brain had already seized upon the scheme with every intention of carrying it out. The wilderness lay stark and bare, stripped of all delusion—not only in the snow world outside but in the hearts of these two men, its sons.

"I have only one hope," Lennox replied. "I hope, unknown to me, that Dan has already dispatched these letters. The arm of the law is long, Cranston. It's easy to forget that fact up here. It will reach you in the end."

Cranston turned through the door into the kitchen. He was gone a long time. Lennox heard him at work; the crinkle of paper and then a pouring sound around the walls. Then he heard the sharp crack of a match. An instant later the first wisp of smoke came curling, pungent with burning oil, through the corridor.

"You crawled from your couch to reach that gun," Cranston told him when he came in. "Let's see you crawl out now."

Lennox's answer was a curse—the last, dread outpouring of an unbroken will. He didn't look again at the glittering eyes. He scarcely watched Cranston's further preparations; the oil poured on the rugs and furnishings, the kindling placed at the base of the curtains. Cranston was trained in this work. He was taking no chances on the fire being extinguished. And Lennox began to crawl toward the door.

He managed to grasp the corner of the blanket on the divan as he went, and he dragged it behind him. Pain wracked him, and smoke half-blinded him. But he made it at last. And by the time he had crawled one hundred feet over the snow crust the whole structure was in flames. The red tongues spoke with a roar.

Cranston, the fire-madness on his face, hurried to the outbuildings. There he repeated the work. He touched a match to the hay in the barn, and the wind flung the flame through it in an instant. The sheds and other outbuildings were treated with oil. And seeing that his work was done, he called once to the prone body of Lennox on the snow and rushed away into the silence.

Lennox's answer was not a curse this time. Rather it was a prayer, unuttered, and in his long years Lennox had not prayed often. When he prayed at all, the words were burning fire. His prayer was that of Samson—that for a moment his strength might come back to him.

CHAPTER II.

Two miles across the ridges, Dan and Snowbird saw a faint mist blowing between the trees. They didn't recognize it at first. It might be fine snow, blown by the wind, or even one of those mysterious fogs that sometimes sweep over the snow.

"But it looks like smoke," Snowbird said.

"But it couldn't be. The trees are too wet to burn."

But then a sound that at first was just the faintest whisper in which neither of them would let themselves believe, became distinct past all denying. It was that menacing crackle of a great fire, that in the whole world of sounds is perhaps the most terrible.

"It's our house," Snowbird told him. "And father can't get out."

She spoke very quietly. Perhaps the most terrible truths of life are always spoken in that same quiet voice. Then both of them started across the snow as fast as their unaided snowshoes would permit.

"He can crawl a little," Dan called to her. "Don't give up, Snowbird. I think he'll be safe."

They mounted to the top of the ridge, and the long sweep of the forest was revealed to them. The house was a singular tall pillar of flame, already glowing that dreadful red from which firemen, despairing, turn away. Then the girl seized his hands and danced about him in a mad circle.

"He's alive!" she cried. "You can see him—just a dot on the snow. He crawled out to safety."

She turned and sped at a breakneck pace down the ridge. Dan had to race to keep up with her. But it wasn't entirely wise to try to rush so fast. A dead log lay beneath the snow with a broken limb stretched almost to its surface, and it caught her snowshoe. The wood cracked sharply, and she fell forward in the snow. But she wasn't hurt, and the snowshoe itself, in spite of a small crack in the wood, was still serviceable.

"Haste makes waste," he told her. "Keep your feet on the ground, Snowbird; the house is gone already, and your father is safe. Remember what lies before us."

WOULDN'T TAKE ANY CHANCE

Girl Had Little Confidence in Young Man's Courage, and Apparently With Good Reason.

He had been keeping her company eight years and had never even mentioned marriage and she had decided to give him a strong hint the first opportunity she had. It came during one of the early spring days. As they started for a walk into the country she caught up a bright red sweater to wear. He touched her arm. "I wouldn't wear that if I were you, Grace," he said. "The field in which the violets grow best has a Jersey bull in it."

"Oh, then I won't wear it," she said emphatically, throwing the red sweater on the rack. "If in eight years you haven't got enough courage to rescue me from an approaching splinterhead I know you wouldn't have enough in a few minutes to save me from an approaching bull."—Indianapolis News.

Average Life of Motor Cars.

As highway transportation develops and passenger cars and trucks become practically the sole means of road travel, the proportion of first purchasers of cars and trucks in the total of car sales will decrease, and the demand for new cars each year will become more and more nearly equal to the number of cars which drop out of service. For this reason it is becoming increasingly important for the trade to know how many cars will be required for replacement of those withdrawn from service. Analysis of registration, production, export and import figures over a period of years leads to the conclusion that the average life of two million cars retired from service in the last seven years was about 5.3 years.—Scientific American.

GIVE ILLUSION OF WINDOW

Chicago Man's Ingenious Idea for Improving Appearance of Room Without Open-Air Outlets.

A neat little illusion that gives to an interior room without a window the appearance of having a couple of windows has grown out of the housing shortage. In one of the remodeled houses the owner has had a window-frame with glass in it set in the wall. There is a space of a piece of studding and then a suggestion of a blue sky.

Curtains are hung over the window and a pair of inside shutters partly closed add to the setting. A plant in a small pot rests on the window sill outside the window. The whole is lighted by electricity, the lamp being out of sight, outside and above the window.

The indirect lighting, the window, the flower and the curtain combine to destroy the feeling that you are in a room with no outlet to open the air and add a cheerfulness that could be obtained in no other way.—Chicago Journal.

Silverlake won their thirteenth consecutive game Sunday by coming from behind in the seventh inning hammering out five hits and scoring five runs, enough to beat the Waukegan club 9 to 7, in the hardest fought game of the season.

A couple Gaston and Alphonse nets in the first inning allowed two hits to drop safely and resulted in four runs for the visitors. The home club had difficulty in overcoming their handicap against the pitching of Coulter, the Great Lakes star.

Silverlake staged a battery rally in the seventh, however, scoring five runs and going into the lead 9 to 7. Neither side threatened to score after this. Both pitchers pitched grand base ball. Edgar having the edge of the argument. Molinare's hitting and base running featured. Mikey made himself prominent by slamming out a triple and three singles in five trips to the plate and ran the bases in Ty Cobb style. Robertson played the initial game with Silverlake and proved himself an exceeding valuable man. Next Sunday the North Side Billiards return to Silverlake with a strengthened lineup. A close game is predicted.

How Rainfall is Recorded.

The government gauge for recording rainfall consists of a cylinder two feet high, eight inches in diameter, upon which a funnel of the same diameter fits. Within that is a brass cylinder of the same height, the diameter a little over two and one-half inches. In it is a measuring tube, the area of which compared with the area of the funnel is as ten to one, so that when a one-hundredth of an inch falls in the funnel it becomes one-tenth of an inch in the measuring tube.

Old Legend May Be True.

Some of the old writers have called the idea of any connection between Cornwall and the Shetlands or a submerged district beneath the waves "vulgar and idle tales," but at the present time the tide has turned and men of natural science and geologists in particular have proved conclusively that once upon a time Land's End, the Shetlands and Brittany were all united, and many are of the opinion that the final parting from the Shetlands was in comparatively recent times.

Mammoth Cave in 1312.

Visitors to the Mammoth cave in Kentucky, whose attention is attracted by the brilliant arches of crystal, by the amazing echoes, and by the diversity of the rock formation, may not remember that this particular locality was once of great practical benefit to the country. For it was by reason of its immense deposits of sulphur, used in the manufacture of gunpowder during the War of 1812, that the spot was first given notice.

Custom Long Kept Up.

Up to a few years ago a horse, saddled and bridled, stood in the stables of the Vikings (Vikins) as it was spelled in the old days) of Treloarson (Cornwall, Eng.) ready for use night and day. For 900 years horses had succeeded each other in commemoration of the escape on horseback of a Viking who lived in the days of the memorable flood which submerged the land, some say in 1914 and others in 1000.

CALEB'S OLD LOVE

By MILDRED WHITE.

(© 1921, Western Newspaper Union.)

Joan sat in the kitchen, and wept uncontrollable tears. Never had she given way like this, but her endurance had reached breaking point. The querulous voice of her mother-in-law, coming from the barren porch outside, and the stretch of dust-dry garden reaching on to a sun-baked country road—all conspired together to add to her desolation. And she had been married to Caleb but six months. Caleb; it was like his opinionated mother to have given him such a name. The pretty dresses she had taken pleasure in wearing were barred as unnecessary luxuries, or things not absolutely devoted to need. She took grim satisfaction in impressing upon her daughter-in-law the fact of her own desirability against a former sweetheart of Caleb.

"That June, girl," she would remark, "nailed silly, just as she was brought up silly, would make a poor wife for Caleb. Glad I brought him to see his mistake in time. Taken, Caleb was, with a pretty face and laughing ways. Laughing folks are always light. The plump one with the quiet eyes will wear you better, I told Caleb, and you are wearin' well, Joan. Get out as much work as I could, and be able now to rest for the first time in my life."

Joan, mutely rebellious, would raise the quiet eyes to her husband's troubled face, but Caleb pressed and harassed as time passed by the growing labor of his inherited farm, saw neither the appeal or reproach. It was a letter that had come that despairing morning which brought Joan to present resentment and tears. A gay, assured sort of letter, from the former sweetheart his mother so often mentioned, directing Caleb in all confidence to meet her at the station that evening.

"June's mother and me were friends as girls," Joan's mother-in-law explained, "she was the well-off one in the big house of the town, and me the poor one. But that never made any difference to her bein' kind. Though she was brought up like June to ways of foolishness, we kept on bein' friends. So, you see, June's got to come here whenever she wants to for a visit. Can't see just what her whim is now; mebbe to study out how happy Caleb is in marriage. They two were always good friends."

Joan, in her browningham, saw the two later, as her husband obediently drove his former sweetheart up from the station. He looked well in his good suit, and lifted happily in some way out of himself. Suddenly, Joan moved into the parlor sitting room to be introduced, but his June remained, the sullen attitude was hard to retain. Even the visitor's contrasting prettiness failed to awaken her envy. Rather was Joan refreshed, as though some fragrant breeze had drifted through the oppressive rooms. June installed her hammock with its crimson cushions beneath a distant tree. In the barren porch she placed her camp chair with added downy pillows for Joan's comfort, a bright covered magazine or two nearby.

"To pick up," explained the guest, "when you have a spare minute from kitchen duties."

Joan glanced fearfully at the disapproving face of her mother-in-law, but June knew no fear.

"I'm trying to make this gloomy abode less gloomy for Caleb's bride," she remarked frankly and cheerfully. She was halfway to her hammock before Caleb's mother could form an indignant response. Joan, wishing the tea dishes as her husband and his guest conversed beneath the tree, was torn by conflicting emotions of jealousy and unaccountable hope. Surely Caleb was attentively interested in his former pretty sweetheart, but surely, too, his gray eyes rested often upon herself with a strangely comforting light. When the two left her alone one evening to drive to the village, Joan spent the time pacing distractedly in the garden; when they returned, June, motoring gayly, passed directly in and upwards to Joan's private sanctum.

"Caleb and I," she announced breathlessly, "have brought a lovely rose rug for your bedroom—the wash kind, too—and candles for your dresser. I'm going to make rose shades for them—just you wait and see," she joyously ended.

Silently the young wife from the doorway watched as the pretty guest moved about the room.

"It was you," she said at last sadly, "who thought this all out. Probably you're sorry for me; probably you know that Caleb doesn't care. That you were his sweetheart."

June swung around. "Sweetheart!" she scoffed, "that was his mother's notion. Really, I was Caleb's true friend and confidant when he became so terribly in love with you that he couldn't live without you," June laughed. "I advised him to let his mother go on thinking of me as a sweetheart, so that you would win out by comparison. Why, my dear," added June, "I am here this very minute because your Caleb sent for me with a plan to help you out of your dreary way. When the old rule is broken you must have courage to carry out the new. You are Caleb's one thought; does that make the room more rose-colored?"

"It makes the world rose-colored," answered Joan.

Gratefully, repentantly, her quiet brown eyes were upraised to meet the laughing ones of June.

A Man's Weight in Gold.
How much is a billion dollars? One billion dollars' worth of coin silver would make a cube nearly 60 feet on an edge. If you were worth your weight in silver that would not make you rich. The weight of a 180-pound man would be balanced on the scales with $2,500 worth of coin silver. His weight in coined gold would be worth only $40,000.
